Good afternoon,

Hope you enjoyed your time away from the office. I have had little contact with you since you replaced Mr. Garrett, but there has been several events since Oxy took over that need clarification. It took a while but Garrett was able to convince me waiting over 25 years for the EPA to act on major environmental damage was in the best interest of the public. Three ground water issues show you are making adjustments before all the site and area sampling data is in. The latest is what i am inquiring about. The carbon filtering of ground water. The issue has been up for discussion between you and Oxy for many months. The decision to act was made over a year ago. The structure was ready at the end of last summer all except the actual filters. They were put into use over three months ago. Is the issue old enough for the public to have access to the data? My conception from years ago was that if it was not under investigation, being discussed or part of a financial fine data was available. Granted there probably is a couple of more reasons to to make an issue a government secret.

We need definition with conversation rules and guidelines. Thank you, Phil
